National health systems are facing significant challenges. However, with the increase in severe cases of COVID-19, serious ethical issues arise that specialists and competent authorities must address when providing medical care to patients. The Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine (Oviedo Convention), the only internationally legally binding instrument in this area, set out unique human rights standards - also provided for the context of health emergency and crisis management - to guide decisions and practices. , both in clinical and research activities. However, in the face of uncertainty and limited resources, difficult decisions must be made collectively and individually, and these decisions can have a significant impact on individuals. The scarcity of resources for providing medical assistance to victims in emergency situations determines one of the most difficult ethical problems. Medical professionals face extremely difficult situations and ethical principles can be tested, which can negatively affect the fulfillment of the main task of caring for patients.

The emergency that arose in connection with the COVID-19 pandemic raised a large number of questions related to accelerated procedures for the creation and use of vaccines, identified the issues of the boundaries of individual freedom and the interests of the majority, showed the new role of digital technologies and not only in medicine, revealed special facets solidarity and responsibility of international health organizations and national governments.

The main goal of the conference is to conduct a broad discussion of the key problems of bioethics and medical ethics in emergency situations, existential risks, biosafety, and rights people in different countries of the world with the participation of leading scientists and specialists in the field of medicine, life sciences, philosophy and law, representatives of different religious denominations and public organizations.

SAMARKAND - PEARL OF THE EAST

Samarkand is one of the oldest cities in the world, whose history, according to scientists, is approaching the third millennium. Sung by poet and writers as the "Eden of the East", "Shining Face of the Earth", the city of Samarkand has seen a lot during its glorious history, and the conquests of Alexander the Great, and the Arab troops led by Kuteiba, and the invasion of the Mongol hordes of Genghis Khan, and a brilliant period as the capital of the state Timurids.

Samarkand became known to the world as the capital of the great Sogd, whose representatives played an important role in the formation and development of the Great Silk Road, the most important transnational highway of the then world, through which goods, cultures passed in a continuous flow, peoples and religions advanced in an endless movement. This has left its spelling to Samarkand, where for centuries in an organic symbiosis intertwined cultures of different peoples, and the city has always been a place of peaceful coexistence of different religions and cultures.

A special page in the history of the city begins in 1370, when it became the capital of the state of the great commander and statesman Amir Timur. Under him, and especially during the reign of his famous grandson, scientist-astronomer Mirzo Ulugbek Samarkand became the scientific and cultural capital of the medieval East. Erected here many palaces, mosques, madrasahs and gardens, and in particular set up an observatory here so far are amazing residents and visitors of the great city.

The heart of the ancient city is the famous Registan Square (XV-XVII centuries), where three structures are located in an organic integrity - Ulugbek Madrasah (1417-1420), Sher-Dor Madrasah (1619-1636) and Tilla-Kori Madrasah (1646-1660) ... Madrasah of Ulugbek, where according to legends the great ruler and astronomer Mirzo Ulugbek himself taught, the great poets-thinkers Abdurahman Jami and Alisher Navoiy studied, is one of the first higher educational institutions of the Muslim East.

The architectural monuments of the city carry a great aesthetic and educational value, spiritually enrich everyone who comes into contact with them. And Samarkand itself organically combines its rich historical past with real realities, being one of the most important scientific, cultural and economic centers of the country.
